

ADLER ARTS CENTER EXHIBITIONS STATEMENT

The arts empower the creative vitality of every identity. The Adler Arts Center acknowledges that all cultures and identities are vital to the arts and the promotion of a culturally democratic community. Cultural diversity goes beyond language, ethnicity, race, and religion, we seek to build and represent all genders, sexual orientation, ranges of mental and physical ability and age, along with social and environmental justice in the exhibitions we present to the public.

Recognizing the racial tensions that exist today, The Adler Arts Center is compelled to confront the bias and inequity that has long existed in our own community, culture, and organization. Our goal for exhibitions moving forward is to include narratives of underrepresented cultures, viewpoints, and artists.

Our exhibition program is always evolving, and we plan to add, adapt, and learn along the way through artist feedback, collaborations, and work with other community organizations. We are determined to be a gallery for all people, and we look forward to working with the many talented artists of our community and beyond.
